Part-time Faculty Experiences

• Experiences are shaped by systemic, institutional, and departmental conditions
• Three features of professional experiences:

  Complicated

  Autonomous

  Impassioned
• “As an adjunct I feel like I'm a lot like my students. I'm trying to kind of like scrap together a better life and I think a lot of the practices that we’re trying to use to engage students we should be using to engage adjuncts. I mean we have very similar very complicated life structures. I think that’s one of the reasons a lot of us really enjoy what we’re doing and we make connections with students because we understand a lot of the struggles that they're going through in a really tangible way.”

• “My work schedule changes at the last minute. This makes very difficult for me to have 1-2 other part-time jobs that I need to survive financially.”
Challenge of Finding Pertinent Information

• “I haven't been informed of many of the policies associated with my position, so I constantly have to ask for information and have made a few mistakes. I ended up ordering my textbooks late. I also made a mistake about canceling a class. It was my fault, but some kind of handbook of policies and procedures would be helpful.”

• “I had to figure a lot of things out and it was lot of like me emailing my Chair and asking her questions and her emailing me back.”
Impacts on Instructional Quality

• “I need to be set up for success. So when I'm getting classes the day before or when I'm not given any instruction on how to access books or when the copy machine is down and I have to make 50 syllabi then I'm stressed and I'm rushed. I'm a big believer in being prepared the very first day because it just kind of sets the mood and the tone for the classroom. So when those types of things happen it makes students not trust you or not believe in you.”
Autonomous

- In survey data, across ten areas of satisfaction, autonomy is ranked highest.
  - “I love my job because of benign neglect: you leave me alone, and I pay you back by doing the best job I can.”
  - “I think that focus on our independence and our ownership of material and respecting that we are able to do that is really wonderful.”
Isolation as the Dark Side of Autonomy

• “I don't really feel connected to the department. I know the supervisor and the secretary, but I don't know anyone else and haven't really been encouraged to meet with anyone else. I don't know very much about the school itself. I am inundated with emails about things that may be important, but I don't really know how important.”

• Proportion of survey respondents who agree that they have strong professional relationships with colleagues:
  – Part-time: 55%
  – Full-time: 86%
Impassioned

• “The students, my colleagues and the subject I teach are the reasons I love being here.”

• “Love my department, love my chair, but the life of an adjunct sucks.”

• The proportion of faculty reporting being extremely or moderately satisfied with their position, overall:
  – Part-time: 68%
  – Full-time: 71%
Uncompensated Work

• “I’d get here at 8 o’clock in the morning and I’d work a full day until 3 or 4 o’clock in the afternoon because [my schedule allowed it]. Sometimes I would just stay because I got to work with other people and see what was going on, get to be committees and things. Yes I'm not getting compensated for it but I'm learning more about how things work here and hopefully that’ll lead to a full-time position.”
